As part of the Mount Airy Museum of Regional History's programming for Black History month, actor and playwright Mike Wiley returned again this year to tell the story of Jackie Robinson, the first African-American to play national league baseball.

Thursday night, Wiley performed his one-man act, "A Game Apart: The Life of Jackie Robinson," at the museum's annex to a crowd of 87.

Read more: Mount Airy News - Wiley's program at museum was well received